SECTION IV: NARRATIVE HISTORY - 1 January 1944 to 31 January 1944

New Years day of 1944 found the regiment poised and prepared to strike more telling blows against the enemy. The operation upon which it was about to embark was the long awaited and much discussed assault on the enemy's "Winter Line", built in depth from San Vittore to cassino, a distance of approximately nine kilometers.

The initial steps taken by the regiment, which was deployed with the 3rd Battalion facing San Vittore, the 1st Battalion echelon to the left and rear of the 3rd Battalion, and the 2nd Battalion in reserve in the San Pietro area, were to probe and feel out with patrols the enemy defenses. Much information of value concerning machine gun positions, best routes of approach and mine fields was acquired as a result of these patrols. Prior to the attack on San Vittore, steps were taken to reduce by using heavy Corps Artillery the machine gun positions discovered as a result of the efficient 3rd Battalion patrolling into the town. These first days of January caused much discomfort and hardships for the troops because of the intense cold and biting winds and snow. During this period, as in the following cold and wet spells, the full worth of combat suits issued to the men of the line was proved.

On the night of 4 January, at 2330A, the wheels of the attack were in motion. The 3rd Battalion was attacking San Vittore, while the 1st Battalion had moved to the north of the 3rd Battalion and was attempting to cross a gulch in the vicinity of (946187) and then assault Hill 346, a shoulder of the Mt. Chiaia Hill Mass northwest of San Vittore. In the meantime the 2nd Battalion displaced forward to Cle. Morelle prepared to resist any counterattack, or continue the mission of the 1st Battalion. The morning of 5 January found the 3rd Battalion with a toehold on the town acquired only after bitter fighting against stubborn resistance. One platoon was firmly in the town after an entire night of hand grenades and close contact house to house fighting. Morning found the ammunition supply of the forward platoon low and other elements of the Battalion were sent around the town to approach it from the southwest. Initially, the First Battalion was stopped in its tracks at the gulch, which was its line of departure, by heavy machine gun, mortar and artillery fire, finally being forced to withdraw to a more covered position east of the gulch to allow for a finer adjustment of our artillery fire on specific houses causing particular grief. During the planning stage of this operation, Major Ray Ericksen, Commanding Officer of the 1st Battalion, based on personal reconnaissance, recommended that for his mission, he be permitted to cross the gulch at night and send one company up each nose of Hill 346 thereby avoiding the mines laid in the draw between.

The 3rd Battalion continued throughout the 5th to clear San Vittore almost house for house. The crescendo of the fighting reached its climax that day and finally on the following day resistance collapsed with many prisoners of the 44th German, Infantry Division being taken. For their attack on San Vittore, the 3rd Battalion disassembled a 37 mm Antitank Gun, packed it forward, and made excellent use of the weapon as a seige gun.

The 6th of January found the regiment continuing in its mission. The 1st Battalion, making another stab, crossed the gulch which was its line of departure, and was heavily engaged in fighting for Hill 346. The 1st Battalion was again held up by stiff resistance coming from the east slope of Mt. Chiaia. Colonel Ward decided that two companies did not constitute a large enough force for the task and ordered the 2nd Battalion to aggressively move on to the South nose of Hill 346 and assist the 1st Battalion in capturing the Hill. This added pressure finally caused Mt. Chiaia to fall. Much of the credit belonged to Captain Lance, company Commander of "F" Company, who, finding the progress of his company impeded by resistance from the north, quickly analyzed the situation and succeeded in making a rapid thrust southwest across the face of the mountain; thereby, as a result of his quick decision, adding immensely to the final collapse of the organized resistance of the Hill. The final thrust was carried out with such momentum both in our sector and that of the 168th that little pockets of resistance were left to be dealt with later. Pressure was applied to these pockets on the 7th day of January by the 1st Battalion of the 135th, and the left Battalion of the 168th and they were quickly cleaned out. At the same time the 2nd Battalion cleared the slopes of Mt. Chiaia and established outposts to the northwest. These mopping up operations were carried out under extremely heavy artillery and mortar concentrations.

A line was finally consolidated with the 6th Armored Infantry on the left and the 168th on the right as a result of the 3rd Battalion moving out of San Vittore to clear out resistance on Cle Cicerelli on Hill 224. Throughout this operation excellent support was given the ground forces by the air force, which flew many sorties to bomb and strafe the enemy.

As a result of the operation many prisoners were taken and many of the enemy were killed and wounded. The defeat was so complete that the 134th Infantry Regiment of the German 44th Division was, in fact, routed and therefore forced to withdraw to the east in a practically impotent condition. Everyone lamented that there were no fresh reserves available to exploit the break-through.

During the above described action the Regimental CP moved from the vicinity of San Pietro forward to the town of San Vittore. While in San Vittore the CP was visited by General Kendal, Assistant Commanding General of the 88th Division, who later pushed off with the leading elements of the 3rd Battalion in an attack on Hill 124. His actions were inspiring to the troops and a credit to both him and his division. Attached to the 135th Infantry as observers were other officers and also some enlisted men of the 88th Division, who, during the San Vittore operation, lived and fought with the Regiment.

The next phase on the Division's march to Cassino was the clearing of the town of Cervar by the 168th while the 135th cleared the enemy from the low rolling hills between Mt. Porchio and Cervaro, which eventually led the regiment to Mt. Trocchio. The low rolling ground facing the 135th was believed to be lightly held, but later proved to be the main defenses of Mt. Trocchio and was taken only after very intense fighting.

In the fighting for this low rolling approach to Mt. Trocchio, Hill 189 proved to be a most difficult objective to capture. The mission fell to the 2nd Battalion, which first attacked it on 10 January supported by fire from the 3rd Battalion on the left. The 1st Battalion was in regimental reserve on the Chiaia Hill Mass. The battle for Hill 189 lasted until 1610A, 13 January. "E" Company, the assault company, encountered stiff resistance from small arms, mortar, and artillery fire, and was pinned down 300 yards short of the objective. After several subsequent attempts to capture the Hill failed, "E" Company was withdrawn and "G" Company assaulted the heavily held position and succeeded in grasping the lower half of the hill. After holding tenaciously to its position while being subject to a fierce mortaring and withering artillery concentration for three days, the 2nd Battalion's brilliant action finally caused the hill to fall. When the smoke and din of battle cleared, many enemy dead and wounded lay on the field of battle, and many had been accounted for at the Regimental Prisoner of War Cage; however, in the action the 2nd Battalion suffered many casualties, one of which was Lt. Shell, who was commanding Company "E" at the time. Lt. Shell, a Tennessee "Southerner", who had joined the Regiment in Africa, had faithfully served the Regiment through its adolescence in Tunisia and in its maturity in Italy.

During the operation Lt. Lawson returned from the AFHQ Intelligence School in Africa and immediately began putting into practice many of the things he had learned there.

With the clearing of Hill 189 by the 2nd Battalion, and the taking of Cervaro by the 168th, the Division was in a position to attack the last mountain obstacle before Cassino - the precipitous Mt. Trocchio. Prior to the attack patrols probed forward of the MLR failing to contact the enemy. Indications were that the mountain was unoccupied. Nevertheless, the conservative plan of operation stipulated attacking under the assumption that it was heavily held in the same fashion as its foothills were. Therefore, on 15 January 1944 at 0800A, preceded by an intense artillery preparation, the Division attack jumped off to take Trocchio; the 135th Infantry on the left and the 168th Infantry on the right. The 135th Plan had the 3rd Battalion and the 1st Battalion abreast, the 2nd Battalion occupying the Regimental Reserve position in the vicinity of Hill 189. Enemy resistance was practically nil being confined to light harassing artillery fire. The few casualties sustained came as a result of anti-personnel mines which were encountered at the very summit of the mountain. This was a new technique in mine laying which the Germans employed. The Regimental CP for this operation occupied a position on the SE slopes of Mt. Chiaia. Later it moved back into San Vittore until it moved forward to a house on Hill 124 which formerly had been the 3rd Battalion CP.

With M. Trocchio in our hands, plans were promulgated for the assault on Cassino itself. The 133rd Infantry rejoined the Division and relieved the 168th, which was placed in Division Reserve. The Division was deployed with the 135th on the left and the 133rd on the right. From the 16th January to the 25th January, the Regiment maintained defensive positions on Mt. Trocchio and outposted to the west of the mountain. The 2nd Battalion outposted from Highway #6, south to a point about in the center of the Regimental sector. Intensive patrolling was carried out attempting to gain information as to what enemy unit was opposing our lines, his strength, and deployment and nature of the ground and of the Gari and Rapido Rivers to the front of the Division sector.

On the night 16 January, "K" Company had an unfortunate experience. Reinforced by Engineers, the Company was to cross the Gari River in order to make a faint; the purpose of which was to throw the enemy off balance. A dense mine-field was encountered, the water was found to be too swift for the engineer assault boats and the company returned to its position on the line. Lt. North, who lost a leg in the mine field, begged his rescuers not to come in after him because of the abundant, promiscuous fashion in which the Germans had laid the field.

While in these positions, the 135th conducted several diversionary demonstrations by fire alone in support of various attacks by the 36th Division, which was ~~attempted~~ attempted to cross the Gari River in force to the south of Cassino. The efforts of the 36th Division failed. The positions occupied by the enemy were even more formidable than all previous pessimistic reports had indicated with the failure of the 36th Division to manipulate a successful river crossing, the 133rd Infantry was ordered to make an attempt in the 34th Division sector. The 135th again made a demonstration to cause a diversion, and as a result the 135th drew heavy enemy reaction in the form of machine gun, mortar and artillery fire. The 133rd encountered a dense mine field, was subjected to intense mortar and artillery fire, and finally was forced to withdraw what elements it succeeded in getting across the Rapido River. On 26 January the 135th shifted north of Highway #6 and relieved the 133rd which reverted to Divisional Reserve. The Regimental CP moved to (885227). Patrolling was continued from the new sector occupied by the 135th which was deployed with the 1st and 3rd Battalions abreast again, the 3rd Battalion disassembled a 37mm Antitank Gun and this time packed it forward, placing it in the 2nd story of a house with its muzzle trained in Cassino. The 168th, now on the right, was to make a further attempt to cross the Rapido at 0600A, 27 January, while the 135th was again to pull a faint by fire and movement and thereby contain the enemy in the Cassino area. That night "C" company actually made an initial frontal attack on Cassino. They crossed an irrigation ditch and ran into barbed wire and a mine field.

At 1830A, 27 January, the 135th was informed by the Division G-3 that they were to be relieved in position by the 133rd, retire to an assembly area in the vicinity of San Michele, and prepare to pass through the 168th after they succeeded in taking their initial objective. The relief was completed on the night of 29 January, after which the Regiment marched to San Michele, with the Regimental CP moving also to San Michele. While the troops rested for the first time since relieving the 141st Infantry at San Pietro the previous months, the Battalion CO's and Staffs, Company CO's, Colonel Ward, and Captain Stacy were involved in making a reconnaissance the next two days. The last day of the month found the regiment flexed and on the move again, marching the muddy trails to forward assembly areas preparatory to attacking the high ground overlooking Cassino. At this time the Regimental CP moved to (878246).

During the month of January the 3rd Battalion S-4, Lt. Leo J. Voss, was extremely successful in working out a solution to the problem of adequately feeding front line troops in combat. Experience had demonstrated that in most cases the heavy unit of the "C" Ration was not eaten by men under severe nervous tension and consequently their period of endurance was considerably shortened. As a solution to this problem a plan was evolved whereby the "C" Ration could be supplemented each evening by an issue of sandwiches, pastry, and fruit juices. The favorable reaction to the scheme by the troops was spontaneous.

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICER HAS BEEN AWARDED DECORATION AS FOLLOWS:

A. Legion of Merit

1. ROBERT W. WARD, 017637, Colonel, Inf., for exceptionally peritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services. Through his leadership as Regimental Commander, the 135th Infantry successfully repulsed an enemy attack in force during an early phase of the Tunisian Campaign, later captured Hill 609, a dominating terrain feature of great tactical importance. This successful action was, in a large measure, the result of Colonel Ward's superior leadership and skill in handling his regiment and attached troops. Entered the United States Military Academy from Ohio.

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN HAVE BEEN RECOMMENDED FOR DECORATIONS AND AWARDS AS FOLLOWS:

A. Distinguished Service Cross

1. FILLMORE K. MEARNS, 021106, Lieutenant Colonel, Third Battalion, 135th Infantry Regiment. For extra-ordinary heroism in action on the night of 16th-17th January 1944, near the Rapido River West of Mount Trocchio, Italy. When one of his companies, reinforced was ordered to cross the Rapido river to contact the enemy, Lt. Col. Mearns, the Battalion Commander, accompanied it to study the terrain first hand. Shortly after the forward elements of the company had reached the river, a series of explosions were heard to the rear of the company. Lt. Col. Mearns immediately went back and found that seven men were seriously wounded in a minefield and that all attempts to reach them had resulted in more casualties. Showing extraordinary heroism, coolness, and presence of mind in the face of danger from the minefield and the added danger from enemy fire, since the presence of the company had been detected, Lt. Col. Mearns immediately devised a plan and proceeded personally to open a path in to the wounded. Using a long pole he prodded the soil ahead of him and every few feet he used a door from an abandoned house nearby to slam on the ground to detonate any mines missed by prodding. Without regard for his own self, Lt. Col. Mearns succeeded in getting a path through to the wounded whose lives were saved largely through this prompt and courageous action. This gallantry and extraordinary heroism in the face of the enemy and known dangers was a real inspiration to his entire command and reflects great credit upon the Armed Forces of the United States. Entered service from Berkeley, California.

B. Legion of Merit

1. HAROLD A. HERMANSEN, Master Sergeant, 20707110, Service Company, 135th Infantry, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in performance of outstanding services. He has labored untiringly and unceasingly since the induction of the regiment in organizing and coordinating the many details in such an extent that the regimental supply section has operated flawlessly at all times. His feeling of personal responsibility and devotion to duty have not only relieved the supply section of many administrative problems but have contributed directly to the supplying of the front line units of the regiment with the needed equipment, rations, and supplies at the appointed time and place. Entered service from: Minneapolis, Minnesota.

C. Silver Star

1. RICHARD R. GRIFFIN, 0293402, 1st Lieutenant, Company "B", 135th Infantry Regiment. For gallantry in action near Melizzano, Italy on 12 October 1943, After a previous all-night patrol along the banks of the Volturno River, and on his own initiative, he reconnoitered further during daylight hours for additional information for a crossing and bridgehead. Unaccompanied he was able to not only cross the stream under direct enemy observation, but also to observe hidden enemy rifle, machine gun and mortar positions threatening the river, and then return to the friendly shore under enemy machine gun fire. Because of his courage and initiative in obtaining this detailed information of the enemy and the river, our artillery was able to neutralize enemy positions, allowing our unit to effect a successful crossing and establish a bridgehead. Entered service from Tahlequah, Oklahoma.

2. JOHN A. CUNNANE, 33100903, Corporal, Anti-tank Company, 135th Infantry. For gallantry in action, 16 January 1944, in the vicinity of San Vittore, Italy. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, Cpl Cunnane left the safety of his own fox-hole while under a heavy concentration of enemy artillery fire and crossed 30 yards of open terrain to the aid of a wounded soldier. Although he was not an aid man, Cpl Cunnane administered first aid while the shells were still falling. With the aid of a comrade, he evacuated the wounded soldier to an aid station over a route made hazardous by moderate enemy shelling. Cpl Cunnane's courage and coolness under enemy fire was an inspiration to the men of his platoon and undoubtedly contributed to saving the wounded soldier's life. His action reflects credit on the Armed Forces of the United States. Entered service from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

3. BASIL V. ROCKWELL, 36161746, Private First Class, Anti-tank Company, 135th Infantry. For gallantry in action, 16 January 1944 in the vicinity of San Vittore, Italy. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, Pfc Rockwell left the safety of his own foxhole while under a heavy concentration of enemy artillery fire and crossed 200 yards of open terrain in direct view of the enemy to get a vehicle to evacuate a wounded comrade. Although the enemy shells were falling all around him, he remained with the vehicle finally extricating it from the mud in which it was mired. He then evacuated the wounded soldier although it was necessary to negotiate the only available road, then under enemy shell fire. This act undoubtedly saved the wounded soldier's life, and reflects credit on the Armed Forces of the United States. Home address: Adrian, Michigan.

4. LLOYD W. WILCOX, 37023668, Staff Sergeant, Medical Detachment, Third Battalion, 135th Infantry Regiment. For gallantry in action on the night of 3 December 1943 in the vicinity of Hill 1036 and Pantana, Italy. When the rear of the battalion column which was moving forward toward Pantano was subjected to an intense enemy artillery concentration, S/Sgt Wilcox collected the scattered members of the aid station and directed the bearers to be<sup>the</sup> temporary aid station. Then because his group had lost contact with the moving column, S/Sgt Wilcox, showing great initiative and courage, set out over the unknown terrain to locate the battalion. Three times during the night, S/Sgt Wilcox crossed through an area subjected to interditory enemy artillery fire, and then later led a vehicle on two trips over an unrecoonoitered road to evacuate wounded. All through the night of almost continual shelling, S/SGT Wilcox placed himself in great danger and his brave and untiring work was instrumental in saving the lives of three wounded and established contact between the Medical Aid personnel and the battalion. Such courage and devotion to duty in the face of great danger is a credit to the Armed Forces of the United States. S/Sgt Wilcox's home address is: Timberlake, North Dakota.

5. ROBERT F. McCAA, 33257766, Private First Class, Company "L", 135th Infantry Regiment. For gallantry in action on the night of 11 January 1944, near Mount Trocchio, Italy. When essential wire communications between his company and the Battalion CP were broken by enemy mortar fire, Pfc McCaa, a 511 radio operator, immediately volunteered to trace the line and repair the break, despite the fact that enemy mortar fire was continuously falling in his company area. Shortly after he started out on the line he was subjected to an intense enemy mortar barrage, but disregarding self, Pfc McCaa continued on and repaired the break in the line, thus restoring vital communications. Such willingness to assume tasks not normally required of him in order that his company might have necessary communications has been an inspiration to his comrades and reflects credit upon the Armed Forces of the United States. Pfc. McCaa's home address is: Gallitzim, Pennsylvania.

SECTION III - Narrative History - 1 February 1944-29 February 1944

At 0035A, 1 February 1944, the 3rd Battalion was organized in its assembly area in the vicinity of Cairo prior to attacking Mt. Castellone, a key terrain feature which dominated Caira and the Rapido River crossing in the area. The highest peak at the northern end of the mountain was the initial Battalion objective. The 2nd Battalion, under the command of its new Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Kessner, marched five miles from a point east of the Rapido River to its assembly area in the vicinity of Hill 213, south of Caira.

A coordinated attack by the 3rd and 2nd Battalions was scheduled to jump off at 0630A, with the initial objective of the 2nd Battalion being Hill 382 and 481, otherwise known as Mt. Maiola.

When daybreak arrived, the 2nd and 3rd Battalions has crossed their respective lines of departure at the designated time and committed to the task at hand. Communications were poor and radio communication provided Colonel Ward with his only means of contacting the 3rd Battalion. At 0720A, Lt. Lawson from his OP reported having heard heavy enemy machine gun fire which it was later learned was being directed at the 2nd Battalion. The 2nd Battalion was also receiving heavy artillery fire from the northwest and S/P Artillery fire from the barracks area. The enemy resistance was soon overcome and the results of the attack were favorable. The 3rd Battalion was on its objective at 0935A. Under the concealment provided by a heavy fog on the mountains, the two battalions were able to come upon the enemy almost undetected and the element of surprise was fully exploited. The next day the attack of the regiment was continued to the south, the purpose of the maneuver being to seize the high ground in the rear of Cassino and cut Highway #6, the main highway running from Cassino to Rome. The 2nd day of February found the 2nd Battalion moving south from its initial objective towards Hill 445. The 3rd Battalion was holding on its initial objective waiting to be relieved by the 1st Battalion of the 142nd Infantry prior to continuing the attack southward along the Castellone Ridge in the direction of Hill 706, known as Cle. San Angelo. The 1st Battalion moved on to Hill 382 and attacked Hill 324 in order to clean out the resistance on the left flank of the regiment.

Inasmuch as these maneuvers were conducted under the direct observation of the enemy, due to his holding the commanding ground and the Abbey on Mt. Cassino, our troops were constantly subjected to accurately fired artillery, Mortar, and Nebelwerfer concentration. Prior to the arrival of the 1st Battalion, 142nd Infantry, the 3rd Battalion, 135th Infantry was forced to fight off many enemy counter attacks in order to maintain the penetration it had made into the enemy lines. There was enemy resistance to their north, south and west.

Section III ) Narrative History for February, continued.

After the 1st Battalion, 142nd Infantry, had fought its way south along the Castellone feature and succeeded in relieving the 3rd Battalion, 135th Infantry, the 3rd Battalion again began driving south through the precipitous mountains against bitter enemy resistance. The enemy persistently counterattacked, each one being unsuccessful. The 1st Battalion continued to mop up a stubborn enemy on the left flank of the regiment where they succeeded in the taking of many prisoners from the German 44th Infantry Division.

By the end of the 4th of February, the 2nd Battalion erroneously reported that they had penetrated to Hill 593, and the 1st Battalion was slowly advancing on Hill 445. By this time the strength of the Rifle Companies was depleted as a result of the incessant fighting in which the regiment had been involved since re-entering the line at S. Pietro. The 3rd Battalion alone had suffered 165 casualties in the first four days of this action. This was an all-time high in number and rate for so short a period in the records of the Battalion. By this time some of the rifle companies in the regiment were down to approximately 50% of their fighting strength. Nevertheless, the men of the regiment fought with tenacious fury and succeeded in repelling every counterattack launched by the enemy.

At this time the 1st Battalion, 135th Infantry, was committed on the left of the 2nd Battalion and a coordinated attack was to be made by both Battalions. However, this plan failed. The 1st Battalion failed to make good progress because of heavy small arms and mortar fire coming from the west and also from the Abbey Di Montecassino. It later was ascertained that the CO of the 2nd Battalion, 135th Infantry, had erred in his calculations and his battalion was not on Hill 593 as he had previously reported. This permitted the enemy to fire enfilade fire from an exposed right flank. The Battalion Commander was relieved and Major Landon placed in command. The 1st Battalion did finally succeed in getting some people on Hill 445. From here they dispatched a platoon (actually the size of a squad) to continue the momentum of the drive southward. This platoon succeeded in reaching the walls of the Abbey Di Montecassino where they gathered in 14 enemy prisoners from a cave dug in the Monastery Hill. This represented the furthest advance on the Abbey made by troops of the Division and never was equaled while the Division was in position there.

The enemy kept up his harassing and interdictionary artillery fire and as a result many casualties were sustained by the men and officers of the 135th Infantry. Included in these casualties was Col. Mear, CO of the 3rd Battalion. The command of the 3rd Battalion was abruptly taken over by Capt. Skalicky who carried on in a manner that was a credit to himself and to the splendid traditions of the Regiment.

SECTION III - Narrative History for February - Cont'd

In beating back the many counterattacks, the Regiment literally slaughtered the enemy with accurately placed small arms and artillery fire, and by the employment of many hand grenades. The many counterattacks launched by the enemy found them throwing in fresh battalions of reinforcements which he had rushed from other fronts. In order to counteract the enemy's reinforcing tactics, the front line units were regrouped in the following manner: The 1st Battalion 135th Infantry, shifted to the northwest which placed it still on the left flank of the 2nd Battalion. Meanwhile, the 3rd Battalion on the 168th Infantry took over the sector of the 1st Battalion, 135th Infantry, on Hill 445.

At 0630A, 6 February 1944, the 2nd Battalion in the face of with flanking and frontal fire assaulted what was finally ascertained to be Hill 593 and succeeded in grasping a hold on it. They were immediately counterattacked and driven off. Major Landon, Battalion CO., after mustering the remnants of his reserves, again attacked and again succeeded in retaking the hill. Col. Ward, sensing the precarious position of the 2nd Battalion, immediately dispatched the Regimental I & R platoon to reinforce the 2nd Battalion, and together they succeeded in repelling many counterattacks - five of which occurred within 24 hours. The hill was held but only after the 2nd Battalion and the I & R Platoon who initially went up to reinforce the 2nd Battalion, only Lt. Lawson and S/Sgt. Bailey returned.

During this time the Regimental CP was located in Cairo where operated under most uncomfortable circumstances brought about by harrassing enemy artillery fire and daily air attacks. On the 7th of February 1944, the Regimental CP displaced forward and set up in the same building occupied by the 2nd Battalion CP on the mounta behind Cassino. Colonel Ward and Captain Stacy were both wounded the same day. Col. Ward was evacuated the next morning having suffered a severe leg wound. Col. Everest assumed command of the regiment.

The Division was regrouped and the 36th Division was moved into the sector on the right of the 34th Division in order to make a final coordinated effort in a sustained attack to drive the enemy from the high ground west of Cassino. In this regrouping, the 2nd Battalion was relieved on Hill 593 by elements of the 168th Infantry and the 1st Battalion shifted further to the northwest and went into positions on the right of the 2nd Battalion. The 135th Infantry has the mission of supporting the attack of the 168th Infantry and the 141st Infantry by fire and also was to be prepared to move on to Hill 593 after all the enemy elements had been cleared from the hill in order to be in a position to continue the momentum of the drive and cut Highway #6.

SECTION III - Narrative History- Cont'd

This last effort failed and plans were immediately initiated to relieve the 135th Infantry and the 168th Infantry. The fighting strength of the regiment was sapped as a result of constant, sustained fighting for a period of 48 days. The rifle companies had an average strength of 50 men, with some down as low as 30 men present for front line duty. The regiment was physically relieved by British troops of the 4th Indian Division on the night of 13-14 February and marched approximately 10 miles to an assembly area in the vicinity of San Michele.

During this long spell of combat, mule trains or hand carrying provided the only means of supply and evacuation, most of which was over slippery, steep mountainous trails, heavily interdicted by enemy artillery fire. This difficulty was overcome to a large extent by the combined efforts of drivers, Kitchen personnel, supply personnel, and other units not actually engaged by the enemy.

Upon arrival in the assembly area in the vicinity of Sa Michele, the men of the Regiment were served a hot meal - their first in two weeks. The next day was spent resting, and that evening the regiment was loaded on trucks and moved through Cervaro down Highway #6 to San Angelo D'Alife.

The first few days spent at San Angelo D'Alife was spent in resting and relaxing, cleaning up and taking showers, and setting up a regimental Bivouac. On the 17th of February the first phase of training was begun. One and a half hours were devoted daily to training, the remainder of the day was devoted to resting and relaxing. This policy was continued until the end of the month.

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN HAVE BEEN RECOMMENDED FOR DECORATIONS AND AWARDS AS FOLLOWS:

A. Distinguished Service Cross

1. JOE H. KIMBLE, 01290435, Captain, Company "E", 135th Infantry Regiment. For extraordinary heroism in action on 13 October 1943, vicinity of Squilla, Italy. During the night assault crossing of the Voltorno River by Company E, 135th Infantry, Captain Kimble made the crossing with the point, personally capturing the first prisoner and directing the security of the bridgehead so that the valance of the company could cross. Under intense enemy machine gun fire, Captain Kimble, without regard for his own safety, personally directed the employment of his platoons and supporting weapons in such a skillful manner that the enemy was either destroyed, taken prisoner or driven away. When this isolated attack slowed down, Captain Kimble went to each platoon and gave them the information and inspiration they needed to carry on. The successful completion of their mission by Captain Kimble's Company made possible the safe crossing of the balance of the Battalion, in addition to protecting the flank of an adjacent assault unit. Captain Kimble's courage and determination, as well as his ability to inspire his men exemplify magnificent qualities of leadership. Entered service from Star Route, Mayfield, Kentucky.

2. CLEMENT S. MACKOWIAK, 15374327, Private, Medical Detachment, 3rd Battalion, 135th Infantry Regiment. For extraordinary heroism in action on 8 January 1944, in the vicinity of San Vittore, Italy. Five men of Company "I", 135th Infantry Regiment were seriously wounded by enemy machine gun fire and to reach them necessitated going forward under direct observation and into an area covered by enemy machine gun fire. Private Mackowiak, medical aid man, with utter disregard for his own life, went forward to administer first aid. Four of the men had fallen on the reverse slope of a small knoll, and through sniper and artillery fire Private Mackowiak skillfully and quickly administered aid. To reach the fifth man it was necessary to crawl fifty yards on to the forward slope of the knoll under intense cross fire from enemy machine guns. Displaying outstanding devotion to duty and extraordinary heroism Private Mackowiak went on to the fifth man. In administering first aid to this man Private Mackowiak was wounded in five places but carried on till he assured the saving of the man's life. Such outstanding heroism and deep devotion to duty were an inspiration to all men of the battalion and a credit to the Armed Forces of the United States.

3. ROBERT J. DALE, 32805354, Private First Class, Company "M", 135th Infantry Regiment. For gallantry in action on 5 February 1944, while his unit was in defensive positions on Hill 706, near Cairo, Italy. During a fierce enemy artillery and mortar barrage, when his platoon was left leaderless from battle casualties and the only remaining non-commissioned officer was seriously wounded, Private First Class Dale's platoon became extremely disorganized, with a counterattack in progress. Acting upon his own initiative, heedless of shell and small arms fire, Private First Class Dale left his own place of cover, and, displaying all the qualities of leadership, went from shelter to shelter, exhorting, pleading and encouraging his comrades to go to their guns. His inspiration, courage and knowledge of the situation, gave the confused men of his platoon new courage, purpose, and determination. The men went to their guns and the counter-attack was stopped. Private First Class Dale's example in placing his own personal safety as secondary to the success of the battalion in holding its hard won ground has proved a constant inspiration to the entire company and is a credit to the Armed Forces of the United States. Entered military service from Long Island, New York.

B. Silver Star

1. NORMAN E. BROWN, 01296956, Second Lieutenant, Company "E", 135th Infantry Regiment. For gallantry in action on 12 January 1944, vicinity of Cervaro, Italy. When the Commander of Company "E", 135th Infantry, became a casualty, Lt. Brown displayed high qualities of leadership by immediately assuming command. With utter disregard of his own personal safety, Lt. Brown, although under heavy enemy small arms fire, mortar and artillery fire, reorganized the company and led it in a night attack. Despite the fact that the attack was repulsed, Lt. Brown continued with reorganization and led subsequent attacks which were successful in taking the objective, Hill 189. Lt. Brown's aggressiveless, initiative and courage in the face of grave danger was inspiring to the officers and men following him, and a credit to the armed forces of the United States. Entered military service from Woodville, New Hampshire.

2. PAUL E. NORRIS, 20708703, First Sergeant, Company "G", 135th Infantry Regiment. For gallantry in action on the 11 October, 1943, vicinity of Squilla, Italy. Sgt. Norris volunteered to accompany a patrol whose mission was to test the Voltorno River for possible crossings. Upon arrival at the river, Sgt. Norris although fired on from the enemy shore, tested the river, which was cold and swift, in four different places, reaching the enemy shore on two occasions. The testing of the river was accomplished in bright moon light with the enemy known to be on the opposite shore. Sgt. Norris's utter disregard for his own personal safety and his devotion to duty exemplify high qualities of character and is a credit to the armed forces of the United States. Entered service from Albert Lea, Minnesota.

3. SPERO H. MAKRIS, 31049739, Technical Sergeant, (Then Sergeant) Company "A", 135th Infantry Regiment. For gallantry in action on 21 October 1943 in the vicinity of Alife, Italy. Sgt. Makris, seeing that two men lay wounded in a forward OP voluntarily left the safety of his fox hole and proceeded to their aid across 200 yards of terrain which was under observed artillery fire and covered by fire from a machine gun only 300 yards away. He rendered first aid to them, helped the less seriously wounded men to the safety of a fox-hole and carried the other back over the trail to an abandoned house. Here he gave the wounded man further aid and arranged for his evacuation, all time directing his squad's fire and keeping them in good firing positions. Sgt Makris' corage and devotion to duty was examplary and a credit to the Armed Forces of the United States. Entered the military service from Hartford, Connecticut.

SECTION 7 NARRATIVE HISTORY FOR 1 7TH OF MARCH 1944

The history of the 135th Infantry Regiment for the month of March, 1944, can be divided into the following phases:

- March 1-8 (incl.) Training and Reorganization in the San Angelo D'Alife area. Preparation for movement to the Calore Area.
- March 9 Movement by truck from San Angelo D'Alife to Calore.
- March 10-22 (incl) Training Program and Receiving of Replacements. Preparation for move to the Anzio Beachhead. Move to Staging Area at Bagnoli.
- March 23-25 (incl) Arrival at Anzio Beachhead. Reconnaissance prior to relief of the 7th Infantry Regiment. Planning of the relief.
- March 26-31 (incl) Physical relief of the 7th Infantry Regiment. Assumption of the responsibility for the sector.

March 1-8 (incl)- Training and Reorganization in the San Angelo D'Alife Area. Preparation for movement to the Calore Area.

During this period, the Regiment was engaged in continuing the training program arranged for the previous month. A reorganization under a new Table of Organization and Table of Equipment dated 15 July 1943 was in progress. The new T/O authorized 3100 enlisted men and 152 officers. The new T/E authorized 314 vehicles for the Regiment.

On March 6, Lt. Col. Harry W. Sweeting assumed command of the Regiment, superceding Lt. Col. Everest who had commanded the Regiment from the day Col. Ward was wounded at Cassino.

At 0820 Hours, March 6, a Regimental billeting party composed of one officer and one non-commissioned officer from each company responsible to the Assistant S-3, departed from the San Angelo D'Alife area for Calore to lay out a bivouac for the regiment.

On March 7 and 8 the regiment divided its time between training and preparing to move to the new area at Calore.

March 9- Movement by truck from San Angelo D'Alife to Calore.

At 0500 Hours, March 9, the leading elements of the 1st Battalion passed the IP at Alife. The same day the last vehicle of the regimental convoy closed at 1315 Hours in the new area at Calore. The remainder of the day was spent in establishing the new bivouac area.

---

March 10-22 (incl.) - Training program at Calore. Receiving of Replacements. Preparation for move to the Anzio Beachhead. Move to staging area at Bagnoli.

During this period, the Regimental Commander frequently addressed the Unit Commanders, and took a personal interest in the training program, making inspections and addresses to the troops.

The training program included many defensive night problems combat firing problems and known distance range work. Schools were conducted for the communications and intelligence personnel of the regiment. This particular period of training lasted until March 21.

III

The combat strength of the regiment was considerably increased on March 15 as a result of the assignment of 140 enlisted men and 35 officers, of whom the latter were placed on temporary duty with the regiment.

Plans for the move first to the Bagnoli staging area, and finally to the Anzio beachhead were promulgated by the Regimental Commander. Meetings with the Battalion and Separate Unit Commanders were frequently called in order to work out details for the move.

On the 20th of March, the Regimental Commanders, accompanied by his Battalion Commanders, left the Calore area to go to the Anzio beachhead for reconnaissance. The group proceeded first to the Naples area and embarked for the beachhead the following morning. The actual move of the regiment was to be conducted by the Executive Officer.

The movement of the regiment from Calore to the Staging area at Bagnoli was planned in two phases. The plan stipulated that the 1st Battalion and Special Units would leave for the Staging area on March 21 and embark on LSTs the following day. The 2nd and 3rd Battalions were scheduled to leave for the staging area on March 22 and embark for the beachhead on March 23.

As planned, the 1st Battalion and Special Units left Calore in trucks on March 21. The first march group of the convoy passed the IP at 0830A and arrived at the staging area at 1315 Hours the same day. The name of the staging area at Bagnoli was "TEXAS".

The following day, March 22 the troops in the first contingent, under the command of the S-3, boarded LSTs at Nisida harbor, a small harbor north of Naples, after a three mile march to the docks from the staging area.

March 23-25 (incl) - Arrival at Anzio Beachhead. Reconnaissance prior to relief of the 7th Infantry Regiment
Planning of the relief.

After an uneventful journey, the first troops of the regiment arrived at the harbor of Anzio at 0700 Hours, 23 March, and were subject to a few scattered rounds of enemy artillery. The voyage took approximately eleven hours and the troops ate two meals aboard ship.

Immediately upon disembarking from the LSTs, the troops were guided to waiting trucks and driven to their respective assembly areas.

A Regimental CP was established. The following day, March 24, the remainder of the regiment, under the command of the Executive Officer, arrived at the beachhead. The 3rd Battalion closed in their assembly area at 1315 Hours, and the 2nd Battalion closed in theirs at 1412 Hours.

Prior to the relief of the 7th Infantry by the 135th Infantry the Regimental Commander made daily reconnaissances both from the air and from the ground, and controlled the reconnaissance activities of his subordinate commanders and staff so as not to hamper the activities of the 7th Infantry Regiment.

In order to fully orient the units of the regiment, the Regimental Commander acquired from the 7th Infantry CP all of their current overlays pertaining to dispositions, gun positions, wire, mine fields, and map reference points. These overlays were reproduced and disseminated to all units concerned within the Regiment.

March 26-31 (incl) - Physical relief of the 7th Infantry Regiment.
Assumption of responsibility for the sector

On the night of 25-26, the 1st Battalion and Antitank Company initiated the relief of the 7th Infantry. The Regimental Commander and the Executive Officer left for the 7th Infantry CP at 1830 hours. Upon arrival, the Regimental Commander participated in a conference with Col. Onahandro, CO, 7th Infantry and also held conferences with the commanders of the various supporting weapons units.

At 0115 Hours, the relief of the Antitank Company of the 7th Infantry had been completed and the 1st Battalion relief of the 2nd Battalion of the 7th Infantry was completed at 0320 Hours. These units of the 135th Infantry were under the command of the 7th Infantry.

At 1830 Hours, March 24, the 3rd Battalion moved out of its assembly area by truck to relieve the 3rd Battalion of the 7th Infantry. The Regimental Commander, S-3, Adjutant, and Assistant Adjutant left for the CP of the 7th Infantry again this night. All but the Regimental Commander remained throughout the night.

) V )

The relief by the 3rd Battalion was completed at 0300 Hours, 27 March, One squad from "L" Company received three casualties from enemy artillery fire during the relief. At 0515 Hours, the S-3 of the 3rd Battalion reported hearing several tanks to their front behind Hill 82 and all companies of the 3rd Battalion were immediately alerted. The first night in the lines, the 1st Battalion and the 3rd Battalion received a normal amount of harassing artillery fire and experienced no unusual enemy activity.

During this time it was decided that the Regimental Headquarters would publish a news bulletin which was to be distributed down to and including squads on the front lines. However, it was decided to hold the plan in abeyance temporarily because the work of a tactical nature had priority on the limited amount of time available. The problem of disseminating the daily news to the troops was finally overcome when the Regiment was successful in getting a wider distribution of the Division publication, Sandstorm News, and the Corps publication, Beachhead news.

At 1100 Hours, 27 March, the Regimental Commander reported to the CP of the 7th Infantry preparatory to assuming command of the sector that night. The remainder of the Regimental CP group displaced forward at 1900 Hours. By 2130 Hours the old CP was closed out and the new one established.

At 2030 Hours, the 3rd Battalion reported that any enemy patrol of unknown size and strength had penetrated to within 200 yards of "L" Company's position. The patrol was driven off with mortar fire.

The relief of the 1st Battalion, 7th Infantry, by the 2nd Battalion, 135th Infantry, began at 2105 Hours, 27 March, and was completed without incident by 0035 Hours, 28 March. The command of the sector passed to the 135th Infantry at 0050 Hours.

The activities for the night consisted of three patrols. The 3rd Battalion patrol went to a point 200 yards in front of our lines and drew machine gun and machine pistol fire from 987388 and 989308. The patrol returned the fire and withdrew, receiving no casualties. The 1st Battalion had two patrols out this night. Both encountered mines extending from 968319 south-east to the Mole. One from an unknown location on the front of the 3rd Battalion. Generally the night was quiet with the usual harassing fire going in both directions.

Throughout the daylight hours of March 28, various reports were received from the Battalions concerning action taken by the enemy. The 3rd Battalion received S/P fire from LaVilla and also from the vicinity of Hill 81. The latter gun was believed to be firing from the vicinity of 898317. Division Artillery was notified and a Cub was immediately dispatched in an attempt to find the S/P's and bring fire on them. The 1st Battalion and 2nd Battalion reported receiving very little mortar and machine gun fire, however, at 1235 Hours, as a result of harassing fire, the 1st Battalion had one machine gun and one man knocked out.

In the afternoon of March 28, at 1400 Hours, the Regimental Commander left the CP for a reconnaissance over the battle area in one of the 125th Field Artillery's Cubs.

In the early evening hours of March 28, at 1700A, the S-2 of the 168th Infantry reported a small group of enemy in front of "G" Company. Fire was immediately placed on the enemy by the 168th and the 3rd Battalion. The mission finally had to be called off due to the fire of the 168th hitting too close to "G" Company's positions.

During the hours of darkness, frequent reports were received by the Regimental CP from the Battalion and Regimental CP's of incessant enemy activity. This activity took the form of increased artillery and mortar fire, scattered harassing machine gun fire and considerably flare activity.

The 1st Battalion patrol left "A" Company at 2300 Hours and proceeded to the Stream junction of the Boye at 962325 without encountering any enemy.

On March 29, the G-3 informed the regiment that they were to experiment with three 81mm "grapnel" hook shells, 6 WP rifle grenades, and 300 "Molotov" cocktails, with a report to be submitted at a later date on the success or failure of the experiment.

At 1430 Hours on March 29, the Regimental Commander made another aerial reconnaissance of the battle area. TD fire was directed at and knocked out tanks at Bridge #5. Ten hits were reported by the 3rd Battalion.

The Antitank Company OP reported seeing at 1443 Hours, an enemy machine gun firing about 600 yards in front of the left platoon of "A" Company. Cannon Company fired at the enemy with good effect.

At 1500 Hours, the Regimental OP reported seeing considerably vehicle movement along the Velletri-Cisterna Road between 981417 and 982423. The movement was watched for a period of three days and a report submitted to the Division G-2.

During an air raid at 1530 Hours, on 29 March, our Ack-Ack knocked down an enemy plane, The flyer jumped and was immediately apprehended by the 2nd Battalion upon landing. The PW was evacuated through medical channels at the request of the Division G-2 who wanted to turn the PW over to Corps for interrogation.

At 1635 Hours, the S-2 of the 168th Infantry called to say that enemy personnel were reported at 992308 and requested permission to fire. The 3rd Battalion gave a clearance and the enemy was engaged by mortar fire.

On the evening of the 29th March, the Commanding General called the Regimental commander to inform him that the 34th Division had officially relieved the 3rd Division and was now completely responsible for the sector.

The Regimental OP reported seeing a truck towing a gun or trailer moving from east to west at 972348 at 1817 Hours. This was followed by 7 men and 2 horses pulling a wagon. The OP directed fire on this target; however, the results were not thought to have been very good.

When the Regimental Commander returned from his flight in the Piper Cub at 1903 Hours, he reported having successfully adjusted fire on three tanks and one ammo dump.

The enemy actions for the daylight hours of the 29th March were normal with very little activity reported. During the hours of darkness he fired harassing artillery and mortar fire which was on a decreased scale as compared with the previous night. The usual scattered machine gun and small arms fire was exchanged along the Regimental front throughout the night.

The 1st Battalion reported its two-squad patrol had left our lines through the 2nd Platoon of C Company at 1015 Hours, and proceeded northeast for 500 yards, finally being stopped by a machine gun firing from the vicinity of 976323. The patrol engaged the enemy in a fire fight and withdrew with no casualties.

The 3rd Battalion patrol left our front lines through "L" Company's position at 2130 Hours and proceeded up the draw to "Y" at 991307, proceeded east up the fork of the draw to 992308. At this point they drew fire from an enemy out post approximately 25 yards up the draw.

The patrol withdrew along the same route it used going out and returned at 0400A.

A "G" Company patrol left from 996298 at 2145 Hours, proceeded up draw to 990300. From here, they cut across country to a bridge at 991309. The patrol proceeded from there to 993308 and returned to our lines at 0125A without encountering any enemy.

On the 30th of March the 2nd Battalion reported an SP gun which was giving them considerable trouble. The direction on the SP was phoned to Division Artillery and a Cub was immediately sent aloft to attempt to ascertain its location with no success. The 3rd Battalion reported seeing enemy activity near the knocked-out tanks in the vicinity of 992310 and 1210A. Fire from the 3rd Battalion Mortars was placed on the enemy.

At 1450A, 30 March, the CO of Company "A" of the 751st Tank Battalion reported to the Regimental commander that the road from Broadway to the treadway bridge at 983283 was in good condition for tank travel. The bridge itself was suitable for crossings. The road from the treadway bridge to Center Street had a bad, impassable soft spot about half way out where irrigation ditches converge. He told the CO that it would take 3 loads of rubble and drainage pipe to fix the road. The Engineers were notified to repair the soft spot on Penn Street at 987281. While speaking with the Engineers, instructions were issued to prepare bridges at 956312 and 983283 for demolitions.

The evening of March 30 at 1700A, the Regimental OP submitted its compiled report on the amount of vehicular movement it had picked up over a period of three days. This was immediately submitted to G-2 in accordance with his request.

Enemy personnel were observed by the OP at 965357 and the fire of Cannon Company was placed on the enemy who were seen dispersing in all directions.

The attitude of the enemy throughout the 24 hour period of the day remained the same with no unusual incidents reported. He remained concealed during the hours of daylight, and during the hours of darkness, proceeded to increase his harassing artillery and mortar fire, and his sporadic machine gun fire on our front line positions. Shortly after midnight, a ten man German patrol was reported in front of "K" Company. A 14 man ambush patrol was dispatched with no success. The enemy escaped.

At 0050A, the 1st Battalion reported their patrol back. The patrol reported seeing 50 Germans digging in approximately 600 yards in front of their lines in the vicinity of 962325. Artillery fire was placed on the enemy.

At 0450A the 3rd Battalion phoned in their report on a patrol from "I" Company. The patrol left "I" Company's position at 992303 at 2300B, proceeded up ditch to 992308 where they drew machine gun and machine pistol fire from three directions. Patrol believed this to be a well organized outpost position and returned the fire with unknown results. Our patrol returned along the same route after losing one man.

At 0955A, March 31, four enemy were seen in the vicinity of house at 972348. They went into a dugout 50 yards west of the house. The Regimental OP reported this, and the fire of the Cannon Company was placed on the enemy. An SP gun was reported firing into "K" Company at the rate of two rounds a minute at 1030B. The gun was believed to be located at 984324.

Again at 1130B, the OP observed four enemy go into the dugout at 972348, and again Cannon Company fired on them.

At 1145B, two jointly held outposts were arranged; one, with the 158th Infantry on the right, and one with the 157th Infantry on the left. The posts were to be maintained at night only.

The periodic report to Division Headquarters at 1600B mentioned the fact that ten enemy were reported digging in at 99043122 and five enemy digging in at 00153248. A TOT shot using the 3rd Battalion mortars and the Cannon Company was arranged for the Regimental Commander with the CO of the 3rd Battalion.

At 1620B the 3rd Battalion Executive Officer was notified to pick up three 37 mm guns from the 2nd Battalion at the junction of Center Street and Penn Street. The 3rd Battalion was to furnish the crews.

At 2235 Hours, the enemy laid down a smoke screen in front of the wire across the entire 1st Battalion front. The 1st Battalion called for artillery fire to be laid into the smoke. There was no reaction from the enemy.

Shortly after midnight, at 0055B, six or eight tanks were seen and heard in front of Company "C". After all available artillery was placed on them, the motor noises ceased.

The 3rd Battalion sent out patrol from "K" Company at 2130B which went to 927311. There was no physical contact with the enemy.

A patrol from "G" Company, which left at 2230B, went to the knocked out tanks at 991309 and laid an ambush for an enemy patrol. They waited one hour without seeing anyone.

The patrol from the 2nd Battalion, which left at 0100B, laid in ambush at 978322 in the vicinity of House 18. The returning reporting having seen nor heard no enemy.

SECTION VII - CITATIONS AND AWARDS, 1 March through 31 March 1944.

The following named Enlisted Men have been recommended for Decorations and awards as follows:

A. Distinguished Service Cross

1. ALBERT W. PETCAVAGE, 33621020, Pvt. Hq. Co. 2nd Battalion, 135th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action at approximately 2130 hrs. on the night of 8 February 1944, near Cassino, Italy. A litter team of which Pvt. Petcavage was a member, was suddenly caught in an intense enemy mortar concentration. While other members of the litter team hurriedly sought cover from the savage enemy fire, Pvt. Petcavage, displaying utter disregard for his own life, coolly helped the wounded comrade from the litter to a shallow bomb crater and then, instead of seeking cover, he used his own body as a shield to protect the wounded man. Almost immediately thereafter, Pvt Petcavage was struck and killed by shell fragments. The comrade he was shielding was unharmed. This supreme sacrifice, that another man might live, has been a continuing inspiration to the entire command, and upholds the highest traditions of the Armed Forces of the United States. Next of Kin: Anna P. Petcavage, (Mother), Mahoney City, PA.

B. Silver Star

1. HARRY R. HUMPHRIES, 33784000, Pvt. Hq. Co, 2nd Bn, 135th Inf. For gallantry in action on 7 Feb. 1944, during the battle of Hill 593, vicinity of Cassino, Italy. The enemy was continuously shelling the battalion positions, and vital lines of communication were constantly being severed by shell fragments. The numerous enemy counterattacks made it imperative that wire communication be maintained constantly. Pvt. Humphries, along with another wireman, worked untiringly all that day and through most of the night, all the while under intense sniper, machinegun and artillery fire. Again the following morning all the lines of communication were severed by an intense enemy shelling. Pvt. Humphries, with utter disregard for his own personal safety, again went out on the line through numerous heavy impact areas, accurate sniper and machinegun fire. His untiring efforts enabled the Bn Commander to keep in contact with his forward elements to coordinate their efforts in resisting the numerous enemy counterattacks. His devotion to duty and courage in the face of great danger was inspiring to his fellow soldiers. Next of Kin: Ethel E. Humphries (Mother), Upper Darby, Pa.

2. ALBERT B. HOLBROOK, 33651633, Pvt. Hq. Co , 2nd Bn. 135th Inf. For gallantry in action on 7 February 1944, during the battle for Hill 593, vicinity of Cassino Italy. The enemy was continuously shelling the Battalion positions, and vital lines of communication were constantly being severed by shell fragments. The numerous enemy counterattacks made it imperative that wire communications be maintained constantly. Pvt. Holbrook, along with another wireman, worked untiringly all that day and through most of that night, all the while under intense sniper, machinegun and artillery fire. Again the following morning all the lines of communication were severed by an intense enemy shelling, Pvt Holbrook with utter disregard for his own personal safety, again went out on the lines through numerous heavy impact areas, accurate sniper and machinegun fire. He had restored most of the lines of communication before he was seriously wounded by an enemy shellburst. His untiring efforts enabled the Battalion Commander to keep in contact with his forward elements to coordinate their efforts in resisting numerous enemy counterattacks. His devotion to duty and courage in the face of great danger was inspiring to his fellow soldiers and a credit to the Armed Forces of the U.S. Entered Service from Coeburn, Virginia.

C. Bronze Star

McGraw, Robert E., 0393317, Capt., Hq., 2nd Bn., 135th Infantry

Lund, Einar M., 0397371, Capt., Company "H", 135th Infantry

McMahon, Ross J., 20708221, S/Sgt., Hq.Co., 2nd Bn., 135th Infant.

Peel, Donald J., 39906064, Sgt. Hq.Co., 2nd Bn., 135th Infantry

Onasch, Robert F., 33272372. T/4, Med.Det., 135th Infantry

For heroic action in the face of grave danger. On 7 January 1944, vicinity of San Vittore, Italy. When six men of a security outpost, located about 300 yards from the second Battalion, 135th Infantry CP, set off a personnel mine (bouncing baby) which wounded four of the men Captain McGraw, Captain Lund, S/Sgt McMahon and Sgt Peel volunteered to assist T/4 Onasch to evacuate the wounded men across a dense mine field that was also under moderate enemy artillery fire. On the way to the outpost, the party set off two personnel mines which were duds. These incidents did not deter them from continuing on to the outpost. After these incidents, first aid was given the wounded and the party then carried them back to the CP, again through the minefield. This heroic action in the face of grave danger upholds the highest traditions of the Armed Forces of the United States.
